Campbelltown heritage

The word 'Heritage' means something that is handed down from the past, as a tradition. This can provide a sense of belonging between us and allows us to better understand past generations and the history of where we come from which gives us a sense of personal identity.

This means that I belong to Campbelltown. The heritage items in Campbelltown that reminds me of tradition are Campbelltown Railway Station, a building constructed in 1880 which is a late Victorian building of brick.

The station building is linked with the railway which is important as a transportation link.

The Glenalvon house is a classical type of colonial house in NSW. This is close to the town centre and easily seen. This played an important role in the early development of Campbelltown.

Emily cottage is just past Fishers Ghost Creek and built before 1844. Which has special town scape value, is that it is close to the vistas along Queen Street.
